Correspondence

No.1209

Shakespeare Memorial, Stratford on Avon, (England). "I am now in a great worry about the arrangements for the opening Festival." Mentions various people who have offered to assist; Chatterton, Barry Sullivan, Mrs. Theodora Martin, and another. Their aid was made dependendent on certain conditions, a circumstance which the writer found very irksome. Had hoped to put on an historical play as well as a comedy and a tragedy. Wants to know how he could use her in the Festival.

My opinion of Southern character does not improve. I see little evidence of spirit, & I'm sometimes half inclined to think that their good fighting wh'h is indisputable is due largely to ferocity & despair rather than pluck." Qualifies this statement as probably exaggerated. The raid was not barbarous. "I have not heard of one life wantonly sacrificed. The writer is more and more opposed to confiscation. c5 Oxford Terrace (London). The writer is puzzled by the date on the addressee's letter; wonders if she has received the writer's letter enclosing the account of the meeting at the home of the Duchess of Sutherland. "Lord Carlisle would not do anything. Lord Shaftesbury has meddled foolishly-orthodoxy has got into it." The addressee's notion that the 'emorial could be sent to the Anti-Slavery Society "with Garrison's name attached" is impossible. "The old goose of a Lord Shaftesbury says it must be put into the hands of the American Minister" a plan at which the writer laughed immoderately. If the true Garrisonian abolitionists had carried out their plan, the writer could have gently slipped it into the right place, "but the orthodox Lord has killed it, the dear Duchess of (Boston). Refers to contributions to the fair. "Of many expect nothing they are very close fisted most of them & not very rich - This does not apply to the Shaws & Russels." The writer is just moving into her new house and has to do much with small means: "this is bad for me for I have more heart for your fair than for any house made with hands." Will try to sell some tickets for the Van Dyke. The writer sets forth her plan for liberating Latimer: "I want all the colored men women & children & all the abolitionists... to fill the streets that day when he is to be tried." Thinks there will be "hundreds - nay thousands... If men are in the crowd there will be no violence."

West Roxbury, Mass.: The writer, on her return from Hingham and Cohasset, urges the addressee, with Henry (G.Chapman, jr.), to visit her at her "cool & quiet" house. Has had "various anti-slavery 'experiences'" and a good talk with Jairus Lincoln. Asks why the Standard is sold at so low a price and why it is cheaper than the Liberator. Thinks it preferable to have the Standard properly paid for by subscribers "than to tax A. B. and C. to support it for them."

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman.

[1853?] Oxford Terrace. The writer tells what is on her mind in regard to a school for colored pupils planned by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Agrees with the addressee, but considers that "this is Mrs. Stowe's affair" and that she will probably have her own way in any case. The writer is in favor of the school plan and believes that the education of free colored people is a step toward their freedom. Believes the addressee not "quite moonstruck enough" to believe that she can induce Mrs. Stowe to deliver the money raised by her friends "for her to use as she thinks best" into the hands of the American Anti-Slavery Society. Suggests asking Mrs. Stowe to place the money in the hands of trustees to be used for the education of colored men or women in any school or college in America
